

Oxford Institute of Clinical Psychology Training Post-Graduate Certificate in Supervision

Validated by University of Oxford

An exciting opportunity for those who use psychological principles in their work to complete a 1 year PG Cert in supervision, validated by the University of Oxford, starting in October 2016. This innovative inter-disciplinary course is currently in its 2nd year, and has received excellent feedback from students.

This course provides high quality training in the key skills required to be an effective supervisor, drawing on a range of models, theory and research, with a particular emphasis on the supervisory relationship. It is relevant for those working in a range of contexts, including mental health nursing, social work, psychological therapies and education.

The course team are experienced trainers, supervisors and researchers in this field, committed to providing a supportive environment for participants' learning.

Applications are invited from health and social care professionals, applied psychologists, qualified psychotherapists, counsellors and coaches.

Fees for 2016 to be confirmed, but likely to be approx: £3,100

Testimonials from 2014 cohort

“This course has been a wonderful learning opportunity; the range of different professionals in the cohort has really helped me to explore, challenge and develop my understanding of supervision. My practice has vastly improved”.

“An excellent course which balances the theory and practice of supervision perfectly!”

“Offers the opportunity to study supervision in an integrative way, systematically and scientifically. A thoroughly enjoyable course; the teaching staff have gone above and beyond to help me throughout my time on the course!”

“The best CPD I have done”
